REPORTING CONCERNS ONLINE CLASS (3 clock hours)

CLASS DESCRIPTION: This training is designed for caregivers and educators and administrators of child care programs or schools. Students will learn how to determine when and how to best approach families when they have a concern about a child's development or behavior.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES: As a result of this training, participants will be able to:

- Identify whether or not it is appropriate to approach parents with a concern about a child's behavior and/or development
- Describe guidelines for talking with families, and making referrals and/or suggestions for early intervention
- Identify possible reactions of family when hearing about concerns
- List resources for intervention services

WHAT OTHERS ARE SAYING:

I was great to learn a clear plan for how to approach families with concerns.

– Myra Y., NV

The article “What Do I Say to Parents When I am worried about their Child” was excellent.

– Lilian S., PA

It was useful to learn how to approach a parent and useful things to say when you are concerned about a child.

– Melissa B., AL

The approaching procedures to the parents concerning the child were really helpful.

– Shirley M., GA
